

There are four properties of unit cells that may be generalized.

1. The opposite sides of a unit cell are parallel.
2. Each unit cell contains an integer number of structural units (circles, atoms, ions, etc.) - in this case, one.
3. The unit cells fit together so as to fill space completely, and they are identical to one another.
4. The corners of the unit cell can be anywhere.